Setting the Context: India in a Connected World

The theme for the year 2025-26, India and the World – Collaboration • Connectivity • Competitiveness, reflects the growing importance of partnerships, strong infrastructure linkages, and policy reforms in positioning India within an interconnected global landscape. As India advances towards the vision of Viksit Bharat 2047, sustained dialogue between the government, industry, and other stakeholders will be essential to build trust, enable innovation, and strengthen competitiveness. Through its platforms and initiatives, PAFI continues to contribute to these conversations, supporting a more collaborative and globally engaged India.

Foreword by

PRESIDENT

It is a pleasure to share PAFI's Annual Report 2025–26 with you. This year's theme, India and the World – Collaboration • Connectivity • Competitiveness, reflects the moment we are in. India's engagement with the world is deepening and the pace of change is rapid. In such an environment, dialogue, trust, and credible engagement between stakeholders become even more important. PAFI continues to contribute by creating platforms where ideas can be discussed openly and constructively, and where diverse perspectives come together to support informed policy engagement.

This year is also special as PAFI completes eighteen years of its journey. Over time, PAFI has grown into a vibrant and respected platform for public affairs practitioners. What makes this journey meaningful is the shared commitment of our members to ethical engagement, mutual respect, and continuous learning. The strength of PAFI lies in its community and in the willingness of members to contribute their time, insights, and experience to strengthen dialogue and collaboration.

The past year was particularly significant as PAFI continued to introduce new initiatives while building on existing programmes based on feedback from our members, to provide greater value and create more opportunities for learning and exchange of views. The Leadership Conversations series was introduced as a new platform for candid discussions where senior leaders share their experiences and insights on preparing for and managing complex situations and crises, strengthening the community through shared learning. The Annual Lecture was also resumed after a gap of two years, continuing an important tradition of reflection on public policy and governance through the perspectives of distinguished guest speakers.

At the same time, we continued to strengthen existing programmes to deepen engagement between relevant stakeholders, thought leaders, and members. PAFI Roundtables enabled discussions on specific policy themes, allowing for more focused and solution-oriented conversations. Five Roundtables were organised during the year, bringing together experts for intensive discussion on issues that impact member organisations. Our Experiential Learning engagements continued to generate strong interest, with curated visits to institutions such as the Pradhan Mantri Sangrahalaya and Ashoka University, where members had the opportunity to engage with institutional leadership, explore knowledge resources and archives, and gain insights on how ideas, history, and policy intersect in practice.

In addition, Quarterly Updates were introduced to provide members with a brief and structured overview of PAFI's core activities. The Daily Recap was launched to give members brief updates on public policy, economic changes, and geopolitics. These are carefully selected from a variety of government and institutional sources.

The 12th Annual Forum continued to enjoy its status as a marquee event and was the largest edition so far. It brought together leaders from government, industry, academia, media, and the global policy community to deliberate on issues shaping India's economic and geopolitical journey. For the first time, the Forum also enabled focused meetings on the sidelines between the Hon'ble Chief Minister of Telangana, the Governor of New Jersey, the President of the World Economic Forum, and PAFI members. These interactions demonstrated the value of trusted platforms in enabling dialogue that can lead to new partnerships and opportunities.

The publication of The Policy Pivot: Inside India's Strategic Shift marks an important milestone for PAFI as our first book and a reflection of the intellectual depth within our community. I would like to congratulate the editors, Ajay Khanna and Rahul Sharma, for conceptualising and shaping a volume that brings together diverse perspectives on India's policy journey. I also extend my sincere appreciation to the authors who contributed their time and insights. The book reflects practitioner experience and contributes meaningfully to policy discourse. We hope this will be the first in a series of publications that showcase practical insights from the public affairs community.

Our Councils provide valuable sectoral perspectives and deepen engagement on key policy issues. The Advisory Council, Managing Committee, and Founding Members continue to guide PAFI with their experience and commitment, ensuring continuity and purpose in our work.

I would also express my our sincere gratitude to T S Vishwanath, Founding Member and Past President of PAFI, for his leadership and guidance to the Secretariat over the past three years during an important phase of the organisation. I am grateful that PAFI will continue to benefit from his experience and institutional wisdom with him as the Chairman of the Finance & Administration Committee.

I would like to sincerely thank our members for their continued trust and active participation. I am grateful to our partners, supporters, and sponsors for their encouragement and collaboration. My heartfelt thanks to colleagues in the leadership team for their constant support and guidance. I would also like to especially acknowledge the PAFI Secretariat for their dedication and consistent effort in delivering high quality engagements through the year.

As we mark eighteen years of PAFI, I feel confident about the direction ahead. We will continue to strengthen dialogue, encourage learning, and contribute to conversations that support India's continued progress and engagement with the world.

Building trust with sincerity is key to easing governance

Over the years, I have observed that the most potent force in any relationship—whether between individuals, institutions, or nations—is sincerity. It does not generate noise or seek attention; rather, it subtly shapes everything that sustains: Credibility, collaboration, and trust.

Having spent a considerable part of my life at the nexus of business and public policy, I have witnessed how sincerity can transform dialogue into partnership and intentions into progress. Trust, after all, is not constructed through announcements or documents; it is nurtured through consistency—in our verbal expressions, actions, and listening practices. When sincerity is present, progress transpires naturally. Conversely, when it is absent, even the most innovative ideas lose momentum.

Our focus on facilitating business and living should evolve into a culture of trust, where predictability, fairness, and speed define governance and service delivery. Intelligent governance transcends mere technological advancements and efficiency; it encompasses reliability and intent—the ability to fulfill promises, both large and small.

In the era of global competition, sincerity emerges as a strategic advantage. It enhances credibility, sustains investment, and instills confidence. The most competitive economies are not just efficient; they are also trust-

Industry and government need a new pact of trust

India stands at a critical juncture, aspiring to attain a $5-trillion economy and establish itself as a global leader in innovation, sustainability, and inclusive growth. Membership will be in the name of the organisation. Each member organisation can nominate up to three individuals from their public affairs/government affairs/public policy related function teams. Each member will have one voting right.

Code of Ethics

As public affairs professionals, we contribute to a healthy democratic process by bridging the gap between business, civil society, and Indian policymakers. By signing this Code of Ethics, we commit to upholding honesty, integrity, and truth in our work, providing accurate information to aid informed decision-making. We pledge to maintain the highest professional standards, avoiding conduct that could discredit ourselves, our firms, or the practice of public affairs. PAFI's core ethical guidelines are:

- Avoid conflicts of interest and disclose potential conflicts
- Maintain confidentiality and protect sensitive information
- Be transparent in interactions and disclose relevant information
- Treat stakeholders with respect and dignity
- Comply with laws, regulations, and industry standards
