

Dr. Dhanya M. B. is an economist and a Fellow at the V. V. Giri National Labour Institute (VVGnLI). A specialist in labour market studies, she has over two decades of research experience and has held various high-level roles with the Government of India. She has also contributed to the G20 Employment Working Group, the BRICS Network of Labour Research, the ILO, and South Asia and Pacific think-tank forums. Dr. Dhanya M. B. has authored several research papers and publications and has contributed significantly to policy discussions and academic discourses on labour issues in India and abroad. She is a certified trainer for the gender-sensitive business management programme South Asia GET Ahead by the International Labour Organisation. Her areas of specialisation include labour economics, future of work, gig and platform workers, gender, and public policy.