

Jaya Row is a spiritual leader, public speaker, and authority on Vedanta and Indian philosophy, recognized for applying ancient scriptural wisdom to modern corporate leadership, executive decision-making, and personal development. As the founder of Vedanta Trust, her work focuses on leveraging Vedantic principles to manage internal cognitive resources, foster workplace excellence, drive ethical governance, and achieve organizational success alongside personal fulfillment. Over a multi-decade speaking career, she has addressed global leadership platforms, including the World Economic Forum (WEF) in Davos, and conducted executive seminars for major multinational corporations such as Apple, Google, Intel, KPMG, Mastercard, and Shell. Additionally, she has delivered lectures on philosophy and self-management at higher education institutions, including Princeton University, Purdue University, and Washington University.