Minister of State for Electronics and IT Rajeev Chandrasekhar today asserted that India will be a global player in all things technology. He said Government's focus has been to push India from being an outlier to become a serious, competitive participant in global value chains.

Addressing the 15th AGM of Public Affairs Forum of India in New Delhi, he spoke about how a number of global players like Apple, Samsung, and Cisco are shifting to India. He exuded confidence that India will soon be among the top three economies by 2026-27.

Sharing his thoughts on India's Techade journey, the Minister said India's Techade is changing the narrative of India being an IT/ITEs hub. He said it has broadened to include the internet and consumer tech and will also cover AI, Semicon design and production, and quantum computing.

Referring to semiconductor space, Mr Chandrasekhar said Government has created opportunities in manufacturing and design in just 14 months.
